"IB Spotlight: Inspirational Figures embodying Learner Profile Traits"

This December, we shine our IB Spotlight on Malala Yousafzai, an extraordinary advocate for education and women's rights. Malala exemplifies the traits of being principled, courageous, and deeply compassionate. Her unwavering belief in the power of education is matched by her empathy for others, as she uses her voice to uplift children and families facing barriers to learning. Malala's compassion fuels her advocacy, reminding us of the importance of kindness and action in building a more equitable world. As we celebrate the season of giving, let her story inspire us to lead with both courage and care.

Transdisciplinary

Compassion

Compassion is at the heart of building meaningful connections and fostering a supportive community. When we teach children to understand and empathize with the experiences of others, we empower them to take thoughtful action. Whether it's through helping a classmate, showing kindness in difficult moments, or supporting a global cause, compassion transcends boundaries and strengthens our shared humanity. By embedding compassion into our daily practices, we help students develop the skills to create a better, more caring world.

Internationally Mindedness:

Global Issues Awareness
Human Rights

This month, we focus on the importance of human rights—the universal freedoms and protections every person is entitled to, regardless of their background. By learning about human rights, students develop empathy and understand how fairness and justice connect us all. Through conversations and actions, we can inspire our learners to stand up for what is right and build a world that values equality and dignity for everyone.
