"IB Spotlight: Inspirational Figures embodying Learner Profile Traits"

In the wake of the recent hurricane, we've witnessed resilience, courage, and unwavering dedication in our community—especially through the work of linemen who have worked tirelessly to restore power and safety. These everyday heroes exemplify the IB learner profile traits: they are risk-takers, facing hazardous conditions to make split-second decisions that ensure our community's well-being. They are skilled communicators, updating teams and communities with crucial information; they demonstrate deep caring through their commitment to restoring normalcy in our lives. By balancing long hours with essential safety protocols, they protect both themselves and the people they serve. Reflective and focused, linemen learn from each experience, continuously improving to keep us safe. As we rebuild, we are deeply grateful for these individuals who embody the values we seek to instill in our students, making a lasting impact on our lives.

Transdisciplinary

Resilience

This month, as we focus on resilience, we encourage our students to see challenges as learning opportunities that stretch across subjects and situations. Whether in math, science, reading, or the arts, resilience teaches us to approach difficulties with a problem-solving mindset, bounce back from setbacks, and keep our curiosity alive. Through resilience, students build the confidence to tackle real-world problems, connecting their learning in ways that strengthen their skills—and their spirit.

Global Inquiry

This month, we encourage our students to think globally by asking, "How can small actions make a big difference in our world?" Through this question, students can explore how small choices—like reducing waste, showing kindness, or learning about others' cultures—add up to impactful change. By thinking and acting with a global mindset, they discover that their actions contribute to a more caring and connected world.
